If the work be suspended for a short period, say three or five years, the Colony will obtain a little breathing space in which to settle down and recover from its losses and blows instead of the strain upon its resources being continued and still further deferring its restoration to financial vigour. Let it not be imagined that we advocate the abandonment of the work of reclamation such an idea would find few supporters, and on many accounts could not be entertained But for the reasons above stated there can, we think, be little objection to the suspension for a short time of the work on those sections which have not been commenced or for which no contracts have yet been signed. MR. OTTOMAR HAUPT ON THE OVER-PRODUCTION OF SILVER.

The following translation of part of an article recently published in the Cologne Gazette, from the pen of Mr. Ottomar Haupt, originally a Bimotaliist, but since some considerable time one of the foremost champious of a gold currency, may perhaps interest our readers :--

"The peculiar development of the current question in the United States of America at a time when the whole mercantile world anticipatd with the entering upon office of President | Cleveland an entire change of the former per verse currency policy; has suddenly once more brought the difficult silver question prominently to the fore. In both hemispheres one was prepared for anything but this new delay, this laisser aller of matters. notwithstanding the situation, which forcibly push towards a solution. However, it really and truly appears that the leading men i America are struck with blindness, that all such events which, under other circumstances, would merit the greatest attention, go past them without leaving any traces whatever. Has one of all things in the world, no eyes on the other side of the Atlantic for that underliably and enormously increasing output of the silver mines of the world, to which with the growing perfection of manipulating the ore, no limits appear to exist? Since a long time we are treated to the same story that many a mine cannot work any more at present prices and at the same time the production of silver increases in certain countries in unforboded manner. The past year of all Mr. Sassoon's Preceptor, 10st. 10lbs. others is conspicuous for a fall in the value of silver, such as the world has never seen before One panic followed the other in the Landon market. These mines, moreover, as is well known, are number fixed as the establishment of the corps in reality lead minos and silver is only gained as a by-product. In consequence the cost of production is calculated at from about 8d. to 9d for 1892. In California matters are still more favourable.
